Weather Key Points

Regional Operations Center

Western Region

Sunday, June 19

- After a cooler Sunday and Monday, hot temperatures will return for mainly inland areas Tuesday through at least Friday
 - Daytime highs of 100 to 106 are likely across the Central Valley during this time, while the southern deserts warm to 105 to 115 degrees. Even areas closer to the coast will see daytime readings reach 90s, particularly Tuesday and Wednesday
 - Moderate to locally high heat risk impacts are forecast Tuesday through Friday
- Much like what has been noted for several weeks, winds will be locally gusty across many southern California foothill and mountain locations Sunday and through much of next week, bringing localized elevated fire weather conditions (not widespread)
 - Additional periods of breezy winds are expected across parts of the Sacramento Valley and along and east of the Sierra through much of the week
- Mainly dry weather is forecast across the state through midweek, with a few showers and thunderstorms possibly returning to portions of southern and central California for late week and next weekend. However, the exact details remain highly uncertain at this time.
